Animal Rebellion activist say they may return to Muller Dairy in Droitwich

1st October

Protesters were at Muller Milk and Ingredients site in Hampton Lovett in Droitwich in September

PROTESTERS from an animal activist group remain tightlipped about whether more protests will take place at the Muller Dairy site in Droitwich.

Activists from Animal Rebellion superglued their hands to a Muller lorry and blocked off the road near Muller Milk and Ingredients site in Hampton Lovett in Droitwich.

However, plans for a bigger day of action were put on hold following the death of Queen Elizabeth II.

Now, protestors are not ruling out returning to the site for another day of action.

Nathan McGovern has been a volunteer at Animal Rebellion for about a year

Previously the campaign has targeted dairy sites across the UK, but Mr McGovern said the focus of the protest is about transitioning towards plant-based food systems.

"Droitwich may or may not feature in the next actions," he added.

Although it is uncertain whether Muller Dairy in Droitwich will feature in future protests, the group has revealed they will be carrying out an occupation and disruption of central London on Saturday, October 8.

Animal Rebellion's controversial reaction

Several workers were left unable to get to work or earn a day's worth of pay after the protesters blocked off the road on Tuesday, September 6.

The protesters chained and superglued themselves to the tops of the lorries with police having to use a cherry picker to carry an officer up to the top to negotiate with them.

Officers had to free the protesters and put them in a safety harness before using a forklift truck to bring them to the ground.

Emily Gaskell-Martin said: "I work in Worcester, but I haven't got past this road since 6am.

"I think it's ridiculous, I can't see what they're achieving with our cars with the emissions on all the while we're waiting for them to move."

However, Mr McGovern defended the group and said: "We have sent letters to the government and ministers.

"I wrote a letter to Boris Johnson and delivered it and never heard anything back.

"Looking back in history, the non-violent action has often been the one to mitigate change."

!! This weekend 15 Non-Violent Direct Action training sessions took place all across the country !!

♥️ Non-violence is a philosophy that is key to every action Animal Rebellion takes, and throughout September's actions it has been so heartwarming to see how successful previous NVDA trainings have been in empowering action-takers to maintain peace in the face of potential conflict and to keep love at the core of what we do ♥️

? Why this weekend ?

People have been training to take non-violent civil resistance against the UK government next Saturday.

📍 Join us at Green Park station at 11am on the 8th October for a day of plant-based resistance as we occupy the streets of London, demanding that the government support farmers in a transition to a #PlantBasedFuture.

This event is open to all, so bring your friends, bring your family, colleagues and neighbours. Everyone is welcome! We can be so powerful when we come together to ensure that we can achieve Climate and Animal Justice!

🌱 A #PlantBasedFuture is possible! 🌱

♥️ If you're interested in coming along to an NVDA training, there will be more in the upcoming months so keep an eye on socials and join our newsletter on the our website! ♥️
